III. RETALIATORY PERSONNEL ACTIONS, DUE-PROCESS DEFICIENCIES, AND IRREPARABLE HARM

5. Immediately after each protected disclosure, I was subjected to adverse personnel actions that constitute retaliation. The following chronological table lists each action, the due-process deficiency associated with it, and the resulting irreparable harm.

	or purpose of the investigation. The only interview conducted was a sham interview aimed at creating a hostile work environment against the Chief Quality Officer after I reported his violation of Federal Law.	retaliation; no opportunity to respond	reputation; evidence of targeted retaliation to silence protected disclosures

Each of the above actions was taken without compliance with the due-process requirements of 5 U.S.C. § 7513(b), 5 C.F.R. § 630.1505(b), and the Indian Health Manual (IHM), which mandates written, signed approvals for any leave extension exceeding 14 days and requires documentation of any change in duty status.

IV. DUE-PROCESS FAILURES (SUMMARY)

6. All adverse actions listed above suffered the same fundamental deficiencies:

- Absence of a written threat or legitimate-interest analysis required by statute.

- No opportunity for me to respond before the action took effect.

- Lack of signatures or formal approvals for leave extensions, violating both federal law and IHM requirements.

- Unreasonable deadlines for property return and workflow removal, failing the "reasonable time" standard.

These failures render each action unlawful under the Whistleblower Protection Act and the Merit Systems Protection Act.

V. IRREPARABLE HARM

7. Although I remain on paid non-duty status and therefore have not suffered loss of salary, benefits, or seniority, I have endured significant non-monetary injuries that constitute irreparable harm:

- Damage to professional reputation – Public disciplinary-type leave orders, confiscation of credentials, and removal from approval workflows have been communicated to colleagues, external partners, and regulatory agencies, creating a lasting stain on my reputation as a nurse consultant and policy expert.

- Inability to perform official duties – The successive leaves, removal from approval workflows, and denial of facility access have completely prevented me from exercising the duties of my position, rendering me a constructive suspension under 5 U.S.C. § 7512(2).

- Ongoing threat of further retaliation – The pattern of increasingly restrictive actions (administrative → investigative → notice leave) demonstrates a continuing and escalating threat that will persist unless the Court enjoins IHS from taking any further adverse personnel action.

- Chilling effect on federal employees – My experience, documented in multiple filings with the OSC, OIG, CMS, and Congress, sends a clear message to other federal employees that protected disclosures will be met with retaliation, undermining the purpose of the Whistleblower Protection Act and the public interest in encouraging the reporting of waste, fraud, and abuse.

Because the harm is non-monetary, ongoing, and cannot be adequately remedied by money, injunctive relief is essential to prevent further retaliation, to restore my ability to perform my official duties, and to protect the integrity of federal whistleblower protections.

VI. CONCLUSION

8. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing statements are true and correct to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.
